

As a specialist in the exchange of international customs and security data, Alban GRUSON, CONEX CEO, was invited to participate in a round table discussion organized at the Demat'2011 on 5th October, beside Vincent JAMIN, Dematerialization Division Director at DOCAPOST DPS, Nathalie SCHLANG, Marketing and Development Director at CERTEUROPE, Eric FRELAT, RICOH FRANCE's Online Document and Postal Services Manager, and Bruno DILLET, Research and Development Director at CDC ARKHINEO. The round table debate was chaired by journalist Sibylle LHOPITEAU.

Digital preservation is not synonymous with backup or DMS (Document Management System). In the co

CONEX, like the other actors around the table, has been implementing the necessary conditions to achie

Probative digital preservation, a backup for your interests

Describing himself as an editor and supplier of an EDI communication platform, Alban GRUSON from C

- That of a qualified jurist, well-placed to know under what conditions an electronic document can be
- And that of a customs professional who for more than 25 years has been ahead of and accompani

Probative value at the source gives the force to the archived document...

...Because the final document, the customs declaration, is not the only guarantee in terms of respecting

CONEX preserves messages and events, flows: not just a stock of documents. Its undeniable force: to b

Founded 25 years ago, CONEX has made its digital preservation solutions probative, a decisive argume

This is because for shippers, probative digital preservation ensures legal certainty. If they entrust their tr

The traceability, integrity, opposability and durability of electronic declarations in a dematerialized custom